Someone's Dorm Room Just Got Better

The Science Museum of Virginia is missing an eyeball. Thieves stole a fabric cover resembling an eyeball from the Richmond institution Saturday, just 12 hours after the staff wrapped it around the museum's 29-ton Grand Kugel ball to promote an exhibit called "Goose Bumps! The Science of Fear." The eyeball decoration is valued at $4,000. (AP)

'Oh, No, an Extra Gas Tank Is Always a Wise Move'

A man plans to ride his Harley-Davidson about 300 miles without using his hands to steer to raise money for Parkinson's disease research. Phil Comar said the Sunday ride is in memory of his father, who died in 2008. The 61-year-old said he'll steer with his legs and by leaning. An extra gas tank has been added to the back of his motorcycle so he can go nonstop. (AP)

'Well, OK, Sometimes They Explode, Actually'

A 50-pound gas tank dumped in a Bridgewater, Mass., salvage yard exploded and rocketed into the air before crashing through the roof of a nearby home. No one was injured when the cylinder of compressed natural gas crashed into the house Monday. Officials say it appears someone wanting to get rid of the tank took it into the salvage yard hidden among other debris. (AP)

Life Sentence in N.Y.C. Bomb Plot

Shahzad is defiant, warns of further action against U.S.

New York

The Pakistani immigrant who tried to detonate a car bomb on a busy Saturday night in Times Square accepted a life sentence with a smirk Tuesday and warned that Americans can expect more bloodshed at the hands of Muslims.

"Brace yourselves, because the war with Muslims has just begun," 31-year-old Faisal Shahzad told a federal judge. "Consider me the first droplet of the blood that will follow."

His punishment for building the propane-and-gasoline bomb and driving it into the heart of New York City in an SUV last May was a foregone conclusion, since the charges to which he pleaded guilty carried a mandatory life sentence, which, under federal rules, will keep him behind bars until he dies.

But the former budget analyst from Connecticut used the courtroom appearance to rail against the U.S., saying the nation will continue to pay for occupying Muslim countries.

Shahzad had instructed his attorney not to speak, and U.S. District Judge Miriam Goldman Cedarbaum told prosecutors she didn't need to hear from them.

Backstory

Faisal Shahzad attempted to detonate a crude homemade bomb packed in an SUV in Times Square on May 1. Two days later, investigators plucked Shahzad off a Dubai-bound plane at a New York airport. He pleaded guilty in June to 10 terrorism and weapons counts, and admitted that the Pakistan Taliban provided him with more than $15,000 and five days of explosives training, just months after he became a U.S. citizen. hero of the Crusades. He also said: "If I'm given 1,000 lives, I will sacrifice them all."

When asked whether he had any final words, he said, "I'm happy with the deal that God has given me."

Afterward, the head of the FBI's New York office, Janice K. Fedarcyk, cited evidence that Shahzad hoped to strike more than once.

"The sentence imposed today means Shahzad will never pose that threat again," Fedarcyk said in a statement. LARRY NEUMEISTER, TOM HAYS (AP)

Justice Comes in Conn.

Man declared guilty in gruesome killings of woman, children

New Haven, Conn.

A paroled burglar was convicted Tuesday of murdering a woman and her two daughters during a night of terror inside the family's home in a well-to-do Connecticut town.

Hayes

Steven Hayes, 47, was convicted of capital felony, murder, sexual assault and other counts by a jury that heard eight days of gruesome testimony.

Hayes showed no emotion as he stood for the verdict, which triggers

A Broad Impact

The brutal slayings in Cheshire, Conn., in 2007 drew comparisons to "In Cold Blood," Truman Capote's chilling book about the 1959 murders of a Kansas family. They also led to tougher laws for repeat offenders and home invasions. Last year, Gov. M. Jodi Rell vetoed a bill that would have abolished the death penalty in Connecticut, saying the state cannot tolerate people who commit particularly heinous murders. (AP) the trial's second phase, beginning Oct. 18, in which the same jurors will decide whether Hayes should be executed.

Prosecutors said Hayes and another ex-con, Joshua Komisarjevsky, broke into the family's house in Cheshire in 2007, beat the girls' father, Dr. William Petit, with a baseball bat and forced their mother, Jennifer Hawke-Petit, to withdraw money from a bank before they sexually assaulted and strangled her.

Then they tied the girls, ages 11 and 17, to their beds, put pillowcases over their heads, poured gasoline on or around them and set the house on fire, authorities said. The girls died of smoke inhalation.

The sole survivor, Petit, appeared to hold back tears as the verdict was read.

"There is some relief, but my family is still gone," he said. "It doesn't bring them back."

Komisarjevsky faces trial next year and also could be sentenced to death. JOHN CHRISTOFFERSEN (AP)

Community Colleges Lauded

Obama seeks to boost schools, calls for 5M more graduates by '20

Washington

President Obama called Tuesday for community colleges to produce an additional 5 million graduates by 2020 as he convened a White House summit to spotlight the two-year institutions that he said are more important than ever to the country's competitiveness.

Community colleges "may not get the credit they deserve, they may not get the same resources as other schools, but they provide a gateway to millions of Americans to good jobs and a better life," Obama said.

Obama spoke at the start of a daylong meeting with officials from some of the nation's 1,200 path to a college degree.

Community colleges saw a 17 percent enrollment surge between 2007 and 2009.

The White House summit came a day after the president announced a new partnership linking such major corporations as the Gap and McDonald's with community colleges to improve job training.

Obama said the privately funded Skills for America's Future program would make it easier to connect job-seeking students with businesses looking to hire workers.

Toxic Sludge Threatens Danube

Hungary declares an emergency as caustic waste flood worsens

Kolontar, Hungary

A lethal torrent of toxic red sludge from a metal refinery engulfed towns in Hungary, burning villagers through their clothes and threatening an ecological disaster Tuesday as it swept toward the Danube River.

The flood of caustic red mud triggered a state of emergency declaration by Hungarian officials. At least four people were killed, six were missing and 120 were injured, many with burns.

Hundreds were evacuated in the aftermath of the disaster Monday, when a gigantic sludge reservoir burst its banks at an alumina plant in Ajka, a town 100 miles southwest of Budapest, the capital. The torrent of sludge inundated homes, swept cars off roads and damaged bridges.

Named for its bright red color, the material is a waste product in aluminum production that con-

In Kolontar, the town closest to the plant, Erzsebet Veingartner was in her kitchen when the 12-foot-high wave of red slurry hit, sweeping away everything in its path.

“I lost all my chickens, my ducks, my Rottweiler and my potato patch. My late husband’s tools and machinery were in the shed, and it’s all gone,” sobbed the woman, who gets by on a $350 monthly pension.

Emergency workers wearing masks and chemical protection gear rushed to pour 1,000 tons of plaster into the Marcal River in an attempt to bind the sludge and keep it from flowing on to the Danube some 45 miles away. Nearby, desperate villagers waded through the toxic mud trying to salvage possessions with little more than rubber gloves as protection.

High-risk industries such as Hungary’s Ajkai Timfoldgyar alumina plant still produce waste near some of the Danube’s tributaries, posing a threat to the 1,775-mile-long river.

Environmental Affairs State Secretary Zoltan called the spill an “ecological catastrophe.” (AP)

French former trader Jerome Kerviel, right, is escorted into court on Tuesday.

Ex-Trader Fined $6.7B By Court

Paris

Ex-trader Jerome Kerviel was convicted on all counts Tuesday in history's biggest rogue trading scandal, sentenced to at least three years in prison and ordered to pay his former employer damages of €4.9 billion ($6.7 billion) — a staggering sum that drew gasps in the courtroom.

The court rejected defense arguments that the 33-year-old was a scapegoat for a financial system gone haywire with greed and the pursuit of profit at any cost — a decision sure to take some pressure off the beleaguered banking system overall. By ordering a tough sentence for a lone trader, the ruling marked a startling departure from the general atmosphere of hostility and suspicion about big banks in an era of financial turmoil.

It was a huge victory for Kerviel's former employer Societe Generale SA, France's second-biggest bank, which long had a reputation for cutting-edge financial engineering and has put in place tougher risk controls since the scandal broke in 2008. Kerviel maintained that the bank and his bosses tolerated his massive risk-taking as long as it made money — a claim the bank strongly denied. (AP)

Violence Begets Violence

D.C. copes with an increase in shootings at funerals for victims of homicides

Washington

For most, attending a funeral is a time to pay respects and lend support. But increasingly in Washington, funerals are becoming a chance to settle a score.

Last week, Jamal Coates was fatally shot in the bustling area of 13th and U streets NW as he and three friends were set to join a funeral procession. Coates and his friends were among hundreds who had just attended a funeral at a nearby church for a 21-year-old woman who was fatally shot a few weeks earlier. It was just the latest in a string of violent incidents in D.C. that have occurred at or immediately following the funerals of young homicide victims.

On Wednesday, Coates is to be eulogized at a church in Northwest. And because of the growing possibility of violence, District police and peace activists say they will be there to try to put an end to the trend of gang retaliation at funerals.

"To a lot of young people, a church is just another building," said Ronald Moten, co-founder of the anti-gang organization Peaceaholics. "And a funeral gives them a chance to get back at somebody and catch them off guard."

Moten said his anti-gang group plans to have additional counselors at the Coates funeral. He says violence at funerals in the area isn't "unusual" but it is becoming "more frequent."

For District police, such concerns mean an increased presence at services, particularly those involving homicide victims. Cmdr. Daniel Hickson, of the criminal investigation division, agreed that funerals provide one of the basic ingredients needed to carry out a crime: opportunity.

Often, family members or friends of the victim come from rival neighborhoods where crews are dominant. Some see the funeral as a chance to seek retaliation for an event that may or may not have had something to do with the deceased.

Even increased police presence doesn't guarantee that violence won't erupt, authorities say. About a half-dozen officers were posted outside the church at the U Street funeral last week. "No prevention you take will 100 percent guarantee to prevent something," Hickson said.

A candlelight vigil is held in late March for the victims of the shootings after the funeral of Jordan Howe. Three were killed and eight were injured.

"Who thinks to shoot up a funeral? What kind of animal thinks like that?"

NARDYNE JEFFERIES, WHOSE DAUGHTER, BRISHELL JONES, 16, WAS ONE OF THREE MOURNERS KILLED IN MARCH. JEFFERIES SAID SHE HAD NOT LET HER DAUGHTER ATTEND OTHER FUNERALS OF SLAIN FRIENDS BECAUSE OF THE EMOTIONAL TOLL, BUT HAD NEVER THOUGHT JONES WOULD BE UNSAFE AT A FUNERAL.

Recent Bloodshed

► IN NOVEMBER, George Rawlings, 21, was fatally shot just blocks from the Capitol Mortuary at 1425 Maryland Ave. NE after attending the funeral of Ashton Hunter. Authorities said his killers mistakenly believed Rawlings was involved in Hunter's slaying. Two men at the funeral followed Rawlings and fatally shot him several times as he tried to board a Metro bus after the service.

► IN MARCH, four people were charged with plotting to kill mourners who attended the funeral for Jordan Howe, 20, in retaliation for the wounding of Howe's suspected killer. The plotters couldn't carry out their plan at the funeral, but hours later, as mourners — still holding the funeral programs — gathered nearby, the men shot into the crowd, killing three and injuring eight others. It's only a 1 percent bump, but after almost 40 years of annual enrollment losses, the results of this year's early, unaudited count of the student population constitutes good news for D.C. Public Schools.
"People are feeling more faith and confidence in our individual schools," said Chancellor Michelle A. Rhee, who joined Mayor Adrian M. Fenty on the steps of Powell Elementary School in Northwest Washington to make the announcement.

The District has been a little stingy with the details so far. The gain appears to be a 1 percent increase over last October's count of 45,691, but the District hasn't specified. Much of the growth is in preschool and pre-kindergarten, Rhee said, with a gain of 481 students over last year.

She said 73 schools across all eight wards saw increases, although the District has yet to provide school-by-school data.
The data will be audited by a firm hired by the Office of the State Superintendent of Education, which will verify student residency.
The final audited enrollment is usually a bit lower than the raw early count. Last fall's 45,691 slipped back to 44,467 after the audit. Rhee said she thinks the gains will hold up. BILL TURQUE (THE WASHINGTON POST)

A new D.C. bill would outlaw the trapping of certain wild animals such as raccoons.

Unwanted D.C. Wildlife May Gain Protections

Washington

The raccoons, opossums and foxes that roam District neighborhoods can breathe a bit easier.

The D.C. Council gave tentative approval Tuesday to a bill that would implement tough new standards for how animal and pest control companies rid District homes and properties of unwanted wild animals.

The bill, which does not apply to residents or property managers, requires that animal control operators take "all reasonable steps" to try to guarantee the use of humane and non-lethal force in the capture of nuisance and unwanted animals.

"The purpose of the bill is to protect consumers but also wildlife," said Council member Mary

M. Cheh, D-Ward 3, the lead sponsor of the legislation.

Called the Wildlife Protection Act, the bill outlaws the use of glue, leghold and "body-gripping" or body crushing traps or snares to catch nuisance animals such as raccoons and foxes. It also bans the use of poison to control pigeons and sparrows.

The legislation exempts rats and mice, meaning lethal traps can still be used to eliminate those critters. But other wild animals would have among the strictest protections in the nation.

Wildlife and pest control contractors would be required to check their traps every 24 hours to make sure an animal is not confined in one of them. TIM CRAIG (THE WASHINGTON POST)

The AL

TWINS VS. YANKEES

THE GAMES

- 1 Wed. at Minn. (8:37 p.m.)
- 2 Thu. at Minn. (6:07 p.m.)
- 3 Sat. at New York (8:37 p.m.)
- 4 Sun. at New York (TBA)
- 5 Tue. at Minn. (TBA)

SEASON SERIES

Yankees won 4-2.

THE STORY

En route to their 27th World Series title, the Yankees (95-67) swept Minnesota in the first round of the playoffs last year. New York also beat the Twins in the first round in 2003 and 2004. It is the Yankees' 15th trip to the playoffs in 16 years, though the Yanks are the Wild Card after losing the AL East title to Tampa on the season's last day, giving the Twins (94-68) home field for the first playoff series at Target Field.

RANGERS VS. RAYS

THE GAMES

- 1 Wed. at Fla. (1:37 p.m.)
- 2 Thu. at Fla. (2:37 p.m.)
- 3 Sat. at Texas (5:07 p.m.)
- 4 Sun. at Texas (TBA)
- 5 Tue. at Fla. (TBA)

SEASON SERIES

Rays won 4-2.

THE STORY

The only current major league franchise that hasn't won a playoff series, Texas (90-72) is in the postseason for the fourth time. Rangers star Josh Hamilton has hit only .147 with one homer and six RBI in nine career games at Tampa Bay (96-66), which picked him No. 1 overall in 1999. Tampa was no-hit twice and limited to one hit in two other games this year, but Matt Garza threw the first no-hitter in the Rays' history on July 26.

WORLD SERIES MARCH

The road to the Fall Classic begins Wednesday with a series of story lines to watch

Newcomers

Now in his 13th season, Halladay led the NL in wins and innings, threw a perfect game and took a leading role in the Year of the Pitcher. He's among several veterans about to make their first postseason appearances, joining Texas All-Star third baseman Michael Young, Giants first baseman Aubrey Huff and Phillies utilityman Mike Sweeney, who finally got this far in his 16th season. "Only early on will you be able to tell the test of nerves," said former Braves ace John Smoltz, part of the TBS telecasts in the first round.

Big Boosts

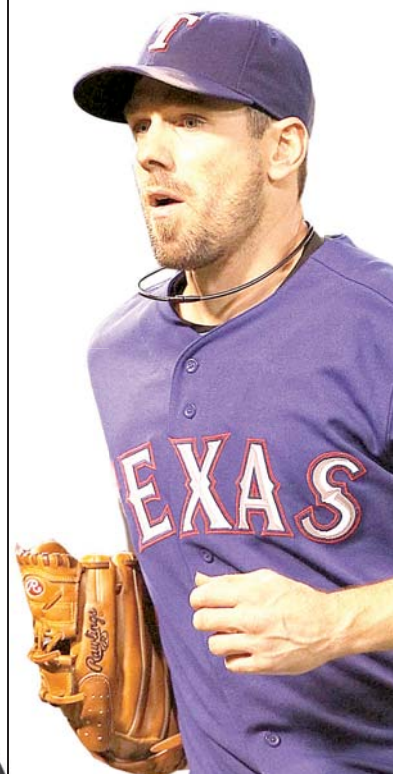

Once again, the left-handed Lee, below, could become a major factor. He won twice for the Phillies in the World Series last year after Philadelphia got him in midseason, and this year Texas acquired him from Seattle before the All-Star break. Houston was going nowhere when it traded Berkman to the Yankees and Oswalt to the Phillies. Minnesota helped itself by getting closers Matt Capps and Brian Fuentes, and the Giants added late punch with Jose Guillen, Pat Burrell and Cody Ross.

Injuries

Most every team is hurting going into these playoffs. Minnesota's Justin Morneau, left, the 2006 AL MVP, is out for the year because of a concussion he sustained in early July. Texas' Hamilton, who led the majors in hitting at .359 and had 32 home runs and 100 RBI, makes his playoff debut after missing nearly all of September with two broken ribs. Longoria, Tampa's star third baseman, didn't play last week because of a strained left quadriceps. Philadelphia's Jimmy Rollins and the Yankees' Mark Teixeira are bruised, too, while Braves third baseman Chipper Jones had season-ending knee surgery in mid-August.

Rookies

Even though voting for rookie of the year ends before the postseason, Giants catcher Buster Posey, right, and Atlanta outfielder Jason Heyward might stage their own duel for the award. Closer Neftali Feliz has been a savior for Texas. And a pair of relievers who saw little action — Chapman with the Reds, Kimbrel with the Braves — could break out, much as Price did in the 2008 playoffs. Chapman hit 105 mph on the radar gun; Kimbrel struck out 40 in only 20 2/3 innings.

The NL

BRAVES VS. GIANTS

THE GAMES

- 1 Thu. at S.F. (9:37 p.m.)
- 2 Fri. at S.F. (9:37 p.m.)
- 3 Sun. at Atl. (TBA)
- 4 Mon. at Atl. (TBA)
- 5 Oct. 13 at S.F. (TBA)

SEASON SERIES

Braves won 4-3.

THE STORY

The Braves (91-71) gave retiring manager Bobby Cox one final trip to the playoffs, thanks to an 8-7 win over Philadelphia and a San Diego loss in San Francisco on the last day of the regular season. The Giants (92-70) are back in the playoffs for the first time since 2003 with a roster that looks much different from opening day — and minus the superstar they had last time around in Barry Bonds.

PHILLIES VS. REDS

THE GAMES

- 1 Wed. at Philly (5:07 p.m.)
- 2 Fri. at Philly (6:07 p.m.)
- 3 Sun. at Cinci. (TBA)
- 4 Mon. at Cinci. (TBA)
- 5 Oct. 13 at Philly (TBA)

SEASON SERIES

Phillies won 5-2.

THE STORY

Coming off their fourth-straight NL East title, the Phillies (97-65) are trying to become the first NL team to win three consecutive pennants since the St. Louis Cardinals did it from 1942 to 1944. The Reds' (91-71) Dusty Baker is the second manager to take three NL teams to the playoffs, joining Bill McKechnie. Baker also went with the Giants and Cubs, and has four division titles as a manager.

Portis Likely to Sit Out Sunday

Redskins back says he needs time to heal from groin injury

The Redskins

Clinton Portis doesn't think his injured groin will allow him to play in the Redskins' game this week against the Green Bay Packers.

Portis told 106.7 The Fan on Tuesday that he's awaiting the results of an MRI on his left groin, which he injured in Sunday's 17-12 win over Philadelphia. "I don't think the team would even let me attempt to go and try to play on Sunday," Portis said. "But who knows? ... I'm going to take my time and make sure I'm healed."

Portis said Sunday he felt a "pop" in his groin before leaving the game. "It's bothering me," he said Tuesday. "It's stiff."

Clinton Portis averaged five yards per carry last Sunday against the Eagles.

A week after Portis stirred criticism for going down without being touched on a 27-yard run against the St. Louis Rams, he was widely praised, including by coach Mike Shanahan, for running hard against the Eagles. "I don't worry about my toughness, man," Portis said. "I stand in the hole, week in, week out. D lineman, linebackers, secondary blitzers or anybody else that's coming through there, and [I] put my head up in there. So, I wasn't worried about my toughness."

Despite repeatedly leaving the game because of the injury, Portis gained 55 yards and caught two passes for 26 yards last week.

But the former Pro Bowler has only 195 yards on 49 carries this year. His playing time was already on the wane with the emergence of Ryan Torain, who was promoted from the practice squad two weeks ago. Torain ran 18 times for 70 yards and a touchdown against the Eagles.

Portis missed the final eight games of last season after suffering a severe concussion in a helmet-to-helmet hit. (THE WASHINGTON POST/AP)

Ilitch to Buy Pistons

The Detroit Pistons have found a new owner, and he knows Motor City sports. The Pistons have decided to sell the team to Detroit Tigers and Detroit Red Wings owner Mike Ilitch, a person involved with the process said Tuesday. Forbes last year valued the team at $479 million, but a weak economy, the threat of an NBA lockout next year and a motivated seller — Karen Davidson — likely mean the price is lower. (AP)

Gone Batty: Orioles second baseman Brian Roberts thinks the headaches that forced him to miss the final six days of the season might have come from a self-inflicted blow to the head with his bat. Roberts recalls knocking himself in the batting helmet after striking out in the ninth inning of a game at Tampa Bay on Sept. 27. After that, Roberts had headaches and symptoms of a concussion, including light-headedness and a loss of balance. (AP)

Healthy Volunteers 21 - 45 Years Old Needed!

The National Institute of Mental Health at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, MD is conducting an outpatient research study exploring the effects of hormones on mild stress. The study requires 3 outpatient visits lasting 3 to 4 hours each. Volunteers will be interviewed and will complete a series of tasks in which physiological functioning will be recorded. Volunteers will receive either a hormone or saline, both given as a nasal spray, and then be exposed to stimuli that may cause mild anxiety.

If you (or someone you know) have been diagnosed with major depression and have anxiety symptoms, you may be able to participate in an NIMH research study that seeks to decrease symptoms of depression and understand the causes of anxious depression. Anxiety symptoms may include tension, worry, apprehension, restlessness, or loss of appetite. This study evaluates the effectiveness and safety of the study drug AZD2327, in the treatment of major depression and anxiety symptoms. This drug has a different mechanism of action from commonly used SSRIs (selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors) for anxiety and depression. There is the chance of receiving placebo in this study. After study completion, NIMH will provide short-term follow-up care, and then you will return to the care of your own provider.

Participants should:

- Be ages 18-65
- Be diagnosed with major depression and have anxiety symptoms.
- Be able to participate in a 12-week outpatient study including an inpatient stay of 4 days at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, MD.

In addition, all research participation is without cost.

- Monetary compensation for procedures.
- Transportation reimbursement provided.

Howard Stands Tall in Miami

17-year veteran adds professionalism to star-studded Heat

Pro Basketball

Miami Heat President Pat Riley said he would not speak to reporters during the team's opening week of training camp. Yet as soon as the name Juwan Howard was dangled, Riley broke his own gag order.

Seconds after declining to comment, Riley commented — enthusiastically. He could not keep quiet about the former Washington Wizard and 17-year-veteran who accepted an NBA veteran's minimum deal to try to win his first championship with the Heat. "He's a revelation," Riley said. "He looks like he's 22 years old again."

Then the Hall of Fame coach volunteered that Howard, 37, should have a place among the game's legends: "He might be one of the best professionals in the history of the game of basketball," Riley said.

In Miami's eyes, Howard's professionalism, solidly maintained skills, veteran smarts and impeccable reputation add real value to a lineup figured to stumble only if egos collide or dissension infects the court. Shortly after Miami landed stars LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh in free agency this summer, Howard was summoned to be both a role model and a role player — playing behind Bosh and Udonis Haslem at power forward.

"It was a no-brainer going to Miami," Howard said. AMY SHIPLEY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Empty Seats Plague India Games

Commonwealth Games

Seas of empty seats in stadiums and arenas. Scales that gave the wrong readings for boxers at their weigh-ins. And then the royal flub: an official who identified Prince Charles as "Prince Diana."

The first few days of competition at the Commonwealth Games are proving nearly as troubled as the squalor and scandal that plagued the run-up to the sporting event.

After a Bollywood-esque opening spectacle that was supposed to turn the focus to the field of play, a whole new set of problems has arisen. Chief among them: how to get a nation of 1.1 billion people interested enough to attend some of the events.

On Tuesday, no more than 100 people were in the 19,000-seat MDC Stadium, a world-class field hockey stadium, while fewer than 20 people were in the 5,000-seat tennis stadium for the first match of the tournament. (AP)

Geek Philosophy

JUSTIN SULLIVAN/GETTY IMAGES

Doesn't Pay to Play

You know those bags of Halloween candy that try to convince you that smaller pieces of candy bars are actually "fun-size"? The company that makes BlackBerrys is pulling the same stunt, dubbing "the world's first professional tablet" as the PlayBook.

There doesn't appear to be much that's playful about this tablet, particularly compared to its main competition, the iPad. For starters, the company didn't announce a launch date or price for the PlayBook. (There's already plenty of speculation that this tablet will never even make it to stores.)

Its 7-inch screen is smaller than the iPad's, yet not that much larger than some top smartphones. It is notable, though, that, unlike the iPad, the PlayBook can play Flash software.

While the BlackBerry tablet will have built-in Wi-Fi capability, it can't tap into cellular data service on its own. Instead, it will have to piggyback on the data service for your BlackBerry phone. Which, of course, means if you don't have a BlackBerry, you won't be able to use the PlayBook fully.

Early looks suggest that the PlayBook is much more trick than treat.

Seth Green launches a Web reality series in which viewers guide a 25-year-old's actions

Technology

Seth Green promises his new Web series "Control TV" isn't a Dr. Evil kind of thing.

"Control TV," which launches Wednesday, is a new reality Web series that is billing itself as a "real-life 'Truman Show.'" Like the Jim Carrey movie, Tristan Couvares will have cameras following him all day long, but with "Control TV," viewers on the Web vote to make Couvares' decisions.

It may sound slightly dystopic, but Green, who is producing the show with Matthew Senreich, says "Control TV" is "part entertainment and part vicarious improvement of another human being."

"It's not Gerard Butler in 'Gamer'; it's not 'The Running Man,'" Green says, referring to two films in which lives are sacrificed for entertainment. "We're doing something a little less malicious than that."

Instead, Green sees the show as a chance for an uncertain, 25-year-old man to be propelled by the Web-watching masses. In his view, the Internet can be a benevolent god.

"We're going to guide it so that none of the decisions are really detrimental to him," Green says. "It could be as simple as putting him in funny clothes when he goes to a job interview or insisting that he has a hidden agenda when he speaks to a girl for the first time, or whether he's going to eat oatmeal or an English muffin to start his day."

Viewers, who can follow at ControlTV.com and sign up for cell phone alerts, will get the opportunity to decide things for Couvares approximately 10 to 15 times a day. Voting will be for multiple-choice options — A, B or C — which means Couvares won't be forced to do anything the show's producers haven't already prepared for. "Based on what his life starts to become, we're going to have to adapt as producers," Senreich says.

Couvares, who was chosen from many applicants, will be streamed live 24 hours a day. Webisodes will summarize each day's events.

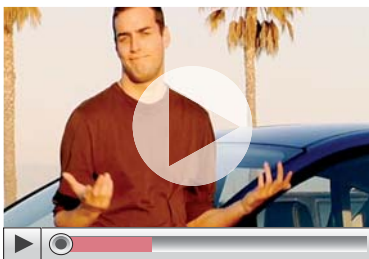

In his audition tape, Couvares said he grew up in Manchester, Conn., and moved to Los Angeles about two years ago.

"At the end of the day, if I'm in a situation, I'm going to know what makes good TV," he says. "I'm going to know what's going to be funny, what people are going to want to see. That's what I bring to the table."

"It isn't like we're pretending there's no camera," Green says. "It isn't like we're saying that this is real life. Everyone is acknowledging how strange and bizarre this situation is." JAKE COYLE (AP)

Green's Scheme

Many have experimented with streaming their lives live on the Internet, but Seth Green hopes "Control TV's" interactivity with the audience sets the show apart. "We're just testing the boundaries of it," Green says.

"I think one of the weirdest parts of this experiment ... is looking at the reaction on the faces of everyone was [sic] you walk around with a paparazzi-like entourage."

Changing Tides: A Series of Ocean Discussions

"Eye on the Storm: Predicting a Hurricane's Path of Destruction" by Dr. Isaac Ginis

Date: Thursday, October 7

Time: 6:00 pm

Location: Baird Auditorium (Ground Floor) Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History
(Please use the entrance at 10th St. and Constitution Ave., NW.)

Cost: Free and open to the public

With hurricane season upon us, join us for an evening discussion with Dr. Isaac Ginis from The University of Rhode Island's Graduate School of Oceanography. His talk, "Eye on the Storm: Predicting a Hurricane's Path of Destruction," will consider how we observe, model, and forecast hurricanes around the world.

Dr. Ginis's lecture is the second installment of Changing Tides: A Series of Ocean Discussions in which top marine scientists discuss current research and how it is helping change the tide in ocean science and conservation.

Picasso Collection Comes to U.S.

Exhibitions

A traveling exhibition of essential works from Pablo Picasso's personal collection is making its U.S. debut this week.

"Picasso: Masterpieces From the Musee National Picasso, Paris" will include paintings, drawings, sculptures and etchings by the artist and serves as a retrospective covering each notable artistic period of his eight-decade career.

Alex Nyerges, director of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond, the tour's second U.S. stop (Feb. 19 through May 15), said Picasso's personal collection contained works the artist consciously chose to shape his artistic legacy, "and he was not a modest man." The 176-work exhibit also highlights Picasso's depictions of his numerous mistresses and muses.

The touring exhibit was made possible because the Paris museum is undergoing a $28 million renovation that won't be complete until 2012. (AP)

A beef ranch in Calif. attracts travelers with farm-to-fork cuisine in a convenient location

Pit Stops

Right there on a desolate strip of Interstate 5 between Los Angeles and San Francisco, the Harris Ranch Restaurant offers a stop in Central California that feeds hungry travelers from its own surrounding farmland.

On the menu: dishes made with Harris beef and Harris garlic; treats from the in-house bakery; and even a Harris wine or pale ale.

"We're true to the farm-to-fork concept," said Stephanie Papagni-LaPlante, director of sales and marketing for the Harris Inn and Restaurant, where the company's under-one-umbrella concept extends to a Harris Ranch-owned gas station and a private airstrip set up for amateur pilots to touch down for a steak dinner.

It's an easy decision to stop by — there's nothing much else around for miles, and a giant slab of prime rib cooks just outside the restaurant's doorway.

The restaurant and 153-room hacienda-style hotel are straddled by Interstate 5 and California 198, and by fields growing Harris Ranch produce. An 800-acre feedlot a few miles away produces up to 250,000 head of cattle per year.

Diners enjoy a locally sourced meal at the Harris Ranch Restaurant in Coalinga, Calif.

"It's a chef's dream. They change the menu seasonally according to what we're growing."

—STEPHANIE PAPAGNI-LAPLANTE,
HARRIS INN AND RESTAURANT

Harris Ranch is a fully integrated beef operation. The company gets cattle from several ranchers and has its own trucks for transport, and the cattle finish off their days in the Coalinga lot before going to company processing plants to become fresh cuts, ready-made meals and meat for restaurants from Alaska to Minnesota.

Harris Ranch is the largest beef producer in California, putting out more than 150 million pounds of beef a year, though there are much bigger beef producers in the U.S.

But the ranch didn't always mean beef. At the beginning, in 1937, it was all about cotton and grain. Today, Harris Ranch produces more than 30 crops including lettuce, tomatoes, onions, melons, oranges, lemons, almonds, pistachios, walnuts and wine grapes.

"It's a chef's dream," Papagni-LaPlante said. "They change the menu seasonally according to what we're growing."

"It's a jewel out here," said Katie Delano, executive director of the Coalinga Chamber of Commerce.

Marinating meats while balancing atop tomato-red stilettos is tiring work, but tough-talkin', pancetta-choppin' Nadia G. ain't complaining. After conquering YouTube with her comedic cooking videos, she now spews gag lines unfit for Grandma's cookbook while mixing up Med-fusion fare in "Bitchin' Kitchen," which debuts on the Cooking Channel Wednesday night at 10:30.

in the Kitchen

CRAB FETTUCCINE ROSE

Ingredients

- 2 crabs (or tiger shrimp)
- Egg fettuccine, 500 grams
- 3 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- Pinch hot chili flakes
- 2 cups sweet cherry tomatoes, halved
- Pinch sea salt
- Pinch brown sugar
- Freshly cracked pepper
- 2 cups half-and-half
- 1/2 cup fresh sweet peas (or frozen peas)
- 1/2 cup plus a pinch of freshly grated Parmesan
- 1/4 cup fresh parsley, minced

Makes Four Servings

In a large pot, boil crab for about 10 minutes. Shell the crab and set all crab meat aside. Next, boil the egg fettuccine in salted water until it is al dente. Strain.

In a pan, heat the unsalted butter over medium heat. Add the garlic, a pinch of chili flakes, and sauté until garlic is golden and fragrant, about two minutes. Throw in the sweet cherry tomatoes, sea salt, brown sugar and freshly cracked pepper.

Cook for about eight minutes, until the tomatoes begin to create a nice, light sauce. Add the half-and-half and bring to a boil. The second it starts to boil, turn the heat down to medium-low and add the sweet peas, 1/2 cup of Parmesan and a big handful of minced parsley. Stir and let it thicken for about eight minutes. Mix in the crab meat and heat through, about two minutes.

Using tongs, mix the cooked fettuccine and the sauce. Serve topped with freshly grated Parmesan and minced parsley.

RECIPE COURTESY OF NADIA G.

have this phrase "brutta figura." It means, like, you don't want to make a bad impression. Just to go to the corner store, we put on makeup. So, if you have a TV show, you'd better be looking sharp! The cabinets match my nail polish. It's empowering. One doesn't have to be afraid to express themselves in the kitchen or in life. Grab life by the bra strap.

You're definitely sexing up the kitchen. How can we make our kitchens sexy?

You have to add fun elements. The kitchen suffers more than other areas of the house. Maybe the kitchen has remained the same for a while. People will put art in their living rooms, but the kitchen is the last place we think to change. The design doesn't have to be taken too seriously, and it's the same with food. Don't be afraid to make the kitchen or the recipe your own. Take a bit of a chance.

If you could change one thing about the way people cook, what would it be?

The way people don't cook. That's one thing I would love to change. I want to get the new generation excited about cooking again. We face many food-related diseases [because] people are not cooking for themselves enough. "Bitchin' Kitchen" is about getting back in the kitchen and making it exciting again. KATHERINE BOYLE (EXPRESS)

Where did you learn to cook?

I learned from my mom and aunt. You know, professional chefs, I give them props, but the best meals I've ever tasted have been cooked by my mom, my aunts, my neighbors. I'd stick my grandma in a three-star Michelin any day of the week.

You're from Montreal.

How did French and Italian culture influence your work?

Montreal is such a multicultural city and we can taste all kinds of fabulous cuisines. I grew up with Lebanese neighbors, so I knew all the mint and lemon and spices and Greek food early. It really is a wonderful rainbow of vast cultural cuisines. It plays into my cooking style. I focus on Italian, but I can't help but fuse.

Do you like cooking in heels?

I do it more often on the show. It's a funny thing. In Italian, we always best to talk about what you know. Human relationships play a huge part of the show. I also touch on low-fat meals and recession recipes ... but it's always about human relationships and trying to see the funny side of things. Life is difficult enough as it is.

What's it like to go from online to prime time?

Extremely exciting, but a bit of a challenge taking a three-minute concept and expanding it. It still has all the funny flavor that the Web series has, but with more room to breathe. There's more to chew on, pardon the cheesy pun.

Are you a cook or a comedian?

I consider myself both. I'm obsessed with food. I think about it all the time, but I also enjoy sitting back and looking at life, and making light of situations and perspectives.

WATCH IT!
'Bitchin' Kitchen'
premieres
Wednesday at 10:30
p.m. on the Cooking
Channel

Bitchin'

What are you bitchin' about?

It's a term that meant "cool" back in the day, like, "That risotto is bitchin'."

So, you're not really bitchin' then.

At times, yes, but when I say something's "bitchin'," I just mean that something's cool, really.

You started out making videos on YouTube, right?

Yes, I'm part of the Net Generation. I started creating comedy videos in the early 2000s and then realized that something was missing from it — specifically, the food. I wanted to take my comedic perspective and blend it with my Italian-obsessed heritage. I treat the show like an Italian family dinner. We talk about everything from make-up meals to deflating your mate.

Your show centers on emotional drama. Why the breakup meals?

ARE YOU SURPRISED THAT CNN GAVE ELIOT SPITZER A JOB AS A TALK SHOW HOST?

"Of course not. American culture rewards bad behavior. If you do sleazy things, you get your own political office, reality show, talk show, music or movie deal, clothing or perfume line. It's pathetic."

COMMENTER KATHLEEN

"Certainly a win-win here. Aside from his poor lapse in judgement with the 'ladies of the night,' Spitzer has contributed remarkably in his professional life as a public servant."

"Wow. This one has got 'massive flop' written all over it. Not only does Panasonic's latest gaming console, the Jungle, look like something from the 1990s; the handheld gaming market is a pretty hard nut to crack, especially given the rise of mobile and tablet-based games."

—POCKET-LINT.COM THINKS THE NEW PRODUCT WILL LIKELY BE A MAJOR FAILURE.

"So what's a television host to do when Bruce Willis shows up wearing a meat toupee? If you're Dave [Letterman], of course you take a bite out of the damn thing."

—NYMAG.COM'S VULTURE BLOG ENJOYED SEEING THE ACTOR SPOOFING LADY GAGA ON THE "LATE SHOW" ON MONDAY NIGHT.

"Chelsea Handler and rapper 50 Cent seem like two of the most unlikely individuals to hook up, but that doesn't mean a steamy rendezvous is completely out of the question."

—TWIRLIT.COM REACTS TO A TMZ REPORT THAT SHOWED THE TWO HANGING OUT AND ALLEGEDLY GETTING "HOT AND HEAVY" AT BLUE NILE JAZZ BAR IN NEW ORLEANS.

"Enjoy your time in the spotlight, Cigar Guy. It is sure to be a wild ride. Even for a man like him, who I suspect knows a thing or two about wild rides. He lives life to the fullest, man. No question about it."

Horoscope

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) One good turn deserves another, and now it's up to you to provide something a friend needs, even though it's not solicited.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You're up against a deadline again, so you must be sure to prioritize. What comes first may also prove surprisingly profitable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may find yourself waiting on someone else, but you can use the time to your advantage without wasting a single moment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're likely to be surprised by an unexpected guest, but perhaps the time has come for you to play catch-up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If it's glory you're after, you must be willing to change your approach. Don't try to do too much too soon.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You can take advantage of a situation that you merely stumble into, but be sure that you're not breaking someone else's rules.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A disagreement is likely to arise over your choice of words. In the end, you'll realize that all anyone wants is a fair shake.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't reveal too much too soon. You may be endangering yourself or another if you spill the beans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Humor serves you well and can get you through even the most difficult situations. Don't be afraid to laugh at yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It'll be up to you to marshal diverse talents and focus everyone on the task at hand. Discipline, of course, may be the major issue.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) No one is telling you that you can't complain when a complaint is in order, but surely you don't want to be known as a malcontent, so use care.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Things are likely to shift subtly, affecting how you make progress, especially when you are expected to be in two places at once.

SCRIPTED*Heidi and Spencer's Divorce Was More Spontaneous

Lisa Rinna and husband Harry Hamlin were on "Today" to promote their new show, "Harry Loves Lisa," when Hamlin received news, via phone and on the air, that the couple's boutique was being robbed. "I'll call you back because we're on live TV right now," Hamlin told the caller. "That's real life, baby!" Rinna commented at the time. (EXPRESS)

PUNK'DJustin Bieber Mysteriously Seen in London That Day

Author Jonathan Franzen declined to press charges after his glasses were swiped at a London launch party for his acclaimed new novel, "Freedom." Franzen's

British publisher, 4th Estate, confirmed Tuesday that the thieves crashed the party, claiming to work for a publisher; one grabbed Franzen's spectacles, and the other gave him a note asking for $100,000 for their return. One suspect was detained briefly by police, who returned the glasses. (AP)

Danielle Staub: Dirtbag or Victim?

Real New Jersey Housewife Danielle Staub's ex-husband is fussing again over her book, "The Naked Truth," in which she stated that he was imprisoned for 18 months, TMZ.com reported. Kevin Maher says that's "patently untrue" and plans to sue publisher Simon and Schuster for $10 million. (EXPRESS)

Reportedly, Bieber has hired these men to guard his hair from Punk-backs.

EMPLOYMENTRight Punk for the Job

Justin Bieber will star on a revival of MTV's "Punk'd," NYmag.com's Vulture blog reported. Founding host Ashton Kutcher resigned in 2007 after four years with the show, but would be executive producer were the series to successfully be rebooted. Vulture hypothesized that Biebs would participate in a few pranks to get started, then transition to introducing each one; unlike Kutcher in the early 2000s, Bieber is too busy to pull the punks himself. (EXPRESS)

LODGING*Also, There Are Probably Bedbugs

Lil Wayne moved Monday into what city jail officials call "punitive segregation" for a month until his expected November release date. It's his punishment for stashing a charger and headphones for a digital music player in his cell earlier this year, officials said. Lil Wayne will now be confined to his new cell about 23 hours a day. (AP)
